Fans have been cherished by the Chinese people since ancient times, yet now they are no longer merely tools for relieving summer heat; instead, they are increasingly admired as works of art. Many fans feature elegant shapes, fine craftsmanship, and are painted with intricate designs of landscapes, flowers, birds, and figures, holding high artistic value. Many renowned Chinese painters and calligraphers delight in inscribing poems and painting pictures on fans, showing their artistic taste. Fans are frequently presented as gifts, conveying delightful blessings and heartfelt emotions. Today, the practical utility of fans has significantly diminished, yet as a cultural icon and a form of art, they continue to play an important role in traditional Chinese culture.
